

"Follow my leader" to the bath—an interesting study of penguin life made by members of the Cope expedition, which has just returned to England after two years of scientific investigation at Grahamsland, in the Antarctic. Penguins, in their habits, often resemble human beings. The members of each band keep strictly to their own formation, like soldiers on parade, and, in passing another band, they salute gravely and continue on their way. Below is the expedition's meteorological screen at Waterboat Point, Grahamsland, where observations were taken. The penguins squatted around the instrument for hours at a time.

New York Herald Foreign Photos.

The wife and son of England's First Lord of the Admiralty. Mrs. L. S. Amery and her son, Julian, at their home in London.

Keystone.

William Jennings Bryan in Masonic garb at the laying of the cornerstone of the new Scottish Rite Cathedral at Miami, Fla.

International.

President Harding's first Christmas gift. H. H. Hedrick of Albany, Ga., and the basket of choice pecans he presented to the President for his Christmas dinner.

International.

Enthroning the new Caliph of the Mohammedan world. The scene at the Seraglio, in Constantinople, with Abdul Medjid (on the left) being installed in the position left vacant by the flight of the Sultan of Turkey.

International.